Course at the Sedes Sapientiae institute teaching care and clinical work for the care of the population or individual in the office since the beginning of the pandemic for professionals in the field of mental health involved. The course develops the theory and supervises the practice of these professionals. The course lasts for one year.

Since the beginning of the pandemic, we have held several lives and videoconferences through the WPA's Disaster section, supporting the professionals involved in attending to the service. This support for mental health is being developed until the present day.

Support and participation of the Chair of this Section in Dra Zampieri's project in Humanitarian Assistance in a time of pandemic for the University of Amazonas and for the University of Blumenau.

Representing this Section, the Chair has been actively participating in various lives and assistance interventions for professionals who work on the front line in order to prevent stress and burnout.

Since the beginning of the pandemic until the present moment, the Section has acted in the prevention of mental health in the most varied sectors of society. We follow the different stages of the development of the pandemic in an attempt to prevent psychological/emotional illness.
